Group policies

The Group’s Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking, Business Ethics and Conduct and Ethical Sourcing policies set out the Group’s commitment to the highest standards of ethical behaviour and require that business relationships and supply chains are managed in line with those values. These policies set out the Group’s expectation that, at a minimum, its suppliers comply with all national laws but where the provisions within the Group’s policies address the same subject, the provision that affords the greatest protection to the individual should be applied. The Group’s policies include its commitment that the Group’s businesses and their supply chains are free from modern slavery and human trafficking.

Relevant policies are summarised below:

- Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking policy – the Group’s modern slavery and human trafficking policy sets out its commitment to safeguarding against modern slavery within its own business or in any of its supply chains. The policy is available on the Group’s website (Modern slavery and human trafficking policy);

- Business Ethics and Conduct policy – the Group’s business ethics and conduct policy sets out its expectation for the Group and its employees. The policy specifically addresses the topics of fair competition, health and safety, environmental matters, equal opportunities, confidentiality and whistleblowing. The policy is available on the Group’s website (Business Ethics and Conduct Policy); and
- Ethical Sourcing policy – the Group’s ethical sourcing policy sets out its expectation for suppliers and specifically addresses the topics of freely chosen employment, freedom of association and right to collective bargaining, working conditions, child labour, wages, working hours, discrimination, regular employment and treatment of employees. The policy is available on the Group’s website (Ethical sourcing policy).

The Group’s policies are reviewed formally by the Board on an annual basis to ensure that they remain appropriate.

Governance

The Group’s Board of directors is responsible for setting the Group’s strategy around modern slavery and human trafficking. They have authority over decision making and have overall responsibility for the policies outlined above.

Risk Assessment

The Group believes that there is a low risk of modern slavery due to the nature and location of the Group’s operations and its supply chain. Nevertheless, the Group remains cognisant of the risks of modern slavery and seeks to continuously enhance its due diligence processes. As a result, the Group is paying particular attention to those parts of our business where we have a higher reliance on temporary labour where we believe the risks of modern slavery may be higher, such as in our scaffold business in North America or our traffic management business in the UK.

Due diligence and monitoring of suppliers

The greatest proportion of the Group’s expenditure relates to its investment in rental equipment. Across the Group’s supply chain, due diligence is undertaken before entering into a supply arrangement for rental equipment providing the Group with an opportunity to assess the supplier.

In North America, the business works with its suppliers to ensure compliance with the Sunbelt Rentals Supplier Code of Ethics, a copy of which is available on the Sunbelt Rentals North American website (Supplier Code of Ethics). In the UK, relevant policies are provided to suppliers as part of the supplier on-boarding process. As part of the on-boarding process, suppliers are required to confirm compliance with the Group’s policies.

Furthermore, on an ongoing basis existing suppliers are monitored to confirm compliance with the Group’s Modern Slavery, Ethical Sourcing and Business Ethics and Conduct policies. The Group’s risk-based approach ensures that it focuses its efforts on those suppliers which are material to the Group or assessed as higher risk.

The Group has maintained long-term relationships with its key suppliers, most of whom are based in North America and Europe, and have made them aware of our expectations regarding ethical business practices.

No modern slavery or human trafficking has been identified within our supply chain in the year. Nevertheless, if evidence of modern slavery or human trafficking were found within any of the Group’s suppliers, action would be taken to work with the supplier to understand the situation and ensure corrective actions are taken. Where such actions were not implemented, the relationship with the supplier would be terminated.

Recruitment and our employees

The Group has over 25,000 employees, c. 75% of which are based in US, c. 8% of which are based in Canada, and c. 17% are based in UK and Europe.

All staff joining the Group are subject to an onboarding process with relevant 'right to work' or other checks as appropriate to the jurisdiction undertaken. This process includes checks where candidates' references are obtained and there is a verification of their employability status. External agencies used to source temporary labour are expected to follow similar processes and are subject to the Group's normal supplier onboarding processes.

The Group does not charge recruitment fees, either directly or indirectly, to candidates as part of the recruitment process.

Training

Senior employees across the Group receive regular business ethics training to ensure that they are aware of their obligations and responsibilities with regards to competing fairly. This takes place every two years in North America and annually in the UK. In the UK, employees also receive specific training related to modern slavery. Similar training for relevant employees in North America has been delivered.

Completion of training is monitored and reported to the Board by the Group's Risk Committee.

Whistleblowing

Ashtead operates a fully confidential third-party operated whistleblowing service for all employees and third parties to raise any concerns that they may have. Whistleblowing matters may be reported via the whistleblowing lines detailed within the Group's Modern slavery and human trafficking policy or directly to Ashtead Group's General Counsel (ewatkins@ashtead-group.com, +44 20 7726 9740).

Ashtead Group's General Counsel will investigate all reports of illegal, dishonest, harmful or unethical activity and report all such allegations and results of subsequent investigations to the Group's board of directors.

More details on this process are provided in the Group's Business Ethics and Conduct policy.

Focus for the year ahead

Ashtead understands that the risks associated with modern slavery are constantly evolving and that it must continue to monitor and enhance its actions in this area.

In the year ahead, the Group's priority areas include:

- ongoing review of the Group's Modern Slavery and other relevant policies to ensure that they continue to consider and address the risks of modern slavery;
- continuing our relationship with Slave-Free Alliance to support our review of the risks of modern slavery;
- continued dialogue with the Group's suppliers in relation to modern slavery, rationalising our supply chain and extending the scope of our diligence and monitoring activities to service providers;
- targeted review of the Group suppliers of temporary labour, specifically considering the policies and procedures in place to address the risks of modern slavery; and
- reinforce education and training of relevant employees across the Group to further enhance understanding of the risks of modern slavery within our business.
