INCOME STATEMENT – KEY VARIANCES

The presentation of financial statements differs between IFRS and GAAP and as such the Company has remapped underlying financial records in accordance with GAAP presentational requirements. In addition, a number of GAAP transition adjustments arise, with the following key areas of difference impacting the Company's consolidated income statement:

- revenue: no differences arise between IFRS and US GAAP in relation to revenue recognition;
- cost of revenues: increase of cost of revenues arises due to the treatment of lease costs under GAAP which for the majority of the Company's leases requires the recognition of a single straight-line charge over the life of the lease, with a corresponding decrease in non-rental depreciation and interest;
- SG&A expenses: adjustments arise principally to:
 - the treatment of certain of the Company's stock-based compensation arrangements, which are treated as liability settled under US GAAP and are therefore revalued at each reporting date (i.e. marked-to-market);
 - differences in the timing of recognition of charges relating to the Group's technology arrangements
 - the Company's election under GAAP to recognize pension related charges immediately in the income statement rather than to amortize over time using the 'corridor approach' given the status of the Company's defined benefit plan;
- non-rental depreciation and amortization: relates to the treatment of leases under GAAP as noted above;
- interest: relates predominantly to the treatment of leases under GAAP as noted above;
- other income (expense), net: relates to historical remeasurements of the Company's equity investments, which are required to be recognized through the income statement under GAAP rather than as a charge to other comprehensive income under IFRS;
- taxation: reflects the tax effect of the adjustments noted above, in addition to the treatment of investment tax credits received under GAAP.

BALANCE SHEET– KEY VARIANCES

The following represents the key areas of difference impacting the Company's consolidated balance sheet:

- rental equipment: adjustments arise due to the treatment of investment tax credits in relation to certain assets acquired by the company;
- property and equipment: adjustments arise predominantly due to the inclusion of those leases treated under GAAP as finance leases relating to property and vehicle leases held by the Company;
- goodwill: adjustments arise due to historical differences in the treatment of amortization resulting in previously amortized goodwill being reinstated on the Company's balance sheet;
- deferred taxation: reflects the tax effect of the adjustments noted above, in addition to the treatment of investment tax credits received under GAAP; and
- lease liabilities / other liabilities: reflects the classification required under GAAP of liabilities relating to those lease arrangements held by the Company which have been assessed as finance leases.
